

Purple is Green

The inconvenient truth about powering the global network...

Networking around the world takes a lot of electricity and that demand for power drives up costs for both home and business users. Generating that power also comes at a cost that is higher than money. It comes at a cost to the world we live in.

By reducing the amount of power required for high-bandwidth connectivity, our BlackDiamond® 8800 series is able to use 50 -75% less power than other power-hungry competitive products. In short, Extreme Networks® has worked to benefit not only our customers, but virtually everyone on the planet.

We hope that someday our competition makes the same commitment, because while we all have to worry about the “network” - it only makes sense to consider the humans.
